COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

MONEY MARKET.

Friday, January 19-6 P. M. The stock market continues quiet. Prices fell off to-day, and the bulls gave way a little. A reaction is just as likely to take place to-morrow as a further deoline. At the first board to-day, Ohio 6s declined & per cent; Canton Co., %; Harlem, %; Long Island, %; Erie, k; and Reading Railread, 2. The transactions at the opening were limited, and there appears to be a disposition among operators to wait the receipt of definite intelligence from the gold regions. It was expected that the steamship Falcon, at New Oreans, from Chagres, would bring later advices from San Francisco, and considerable disappointment was manifested when it was announced that she brought nothing. We have lad so many stories from California, of an official and every other charac-ter, that people are getting tired of them, and wish something to the point. If one half the accounts received are true, there should be at least ten millions of dollars in gold on the way, at this moment, to this country. The highest sum named, as expected, is two millions, and we do not know what information the authority for the statement has that even that amount is on the way. It will be at least six weeks from this before one of the regular line of steamers will arrive at Panama from San Francisco, and we cannot look for any shipments of consequence except by that conveyance. The Crescent City is nearly due at this port from Chagres; she may bring later advices from California, received at Panama by some transient vessel.

In the course of the debate in the Senate, on the appointment of a committee to examine into the causes of the failure of the Canal Bank of Albany, it was stated that the aspect of its reseurces had materially changed for the better since the receiver made his re-port. Instead of being insufficient, as was at first supposed, to redeem the circulation, it now appeared that, in addition to that, about forty or fifty per cent on the deposites would be paid. The annexed statement exhibits the quantity, in tons, of anthracite coal sent to market from the different regions in Pennsylvania, in each year, from the commencement of the trade, 1820 to 1848, both inclu-ANTHRACITE COAL TRADE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

For several years after the commencement of the trade, the receipts were only from the Lehigh region, and, until after 1828, no supplies were received from any other than that and the Schuy,kill sec-Since that time, the receipts from the Schuylkill region have exceeded all others; and during the past four years, more than one half of the aggregate supply has been received from that section of the State. Heretofore, the anthracite coal has been used for domestic purposes of all kinds and for almost every variety of machinery where steam was the propelling power. We have, it is true, imported largely of the bituminous kinds; but their use has been confined principally to dwelling houses, for grates &c. The extension of internal improvements, in the shape of railroads and capals, into the most out of the way and most rens of the country, has brou sition varieties of coals of the greatest value, and different from those which have heretofore been in generaluse. It is exceedingly fortunate that these internal improvements have been extended at a time when our ocean steam payleation has taken such rapid strides It is a curious coincidence that facilities for the favorable extension of ocean steam navigation should be drawn, for the first time, from our soil, at a time when such extensive arrangements were making for the construction of an ocean steam marine.

Anthracite coal bas never been used to any extent in moveable steam engines. It is not adapted to that kind of consumption; and immense sums of money have been wasted in experiments. It answers very well for stationary engines, and for stationary consumption of all kinds. A very valuable and useful report was made to Congress sometime since by Professor Johnson, of experiments made with the the different kinds of coal with a stationary apparatus, built and prepared for the purpose, and so arranged as to afford any required amount of draft. The result of these experiments settled conclusively that anthracite coal, which is the most difficult of ignition, cannot be used on board of steamships without the aid of powerful blowers; and so far as attempts have been made to use it on railroads, they have proved complete failures. Coals possessing the most speedy powers of ignition and the highest evaporative power, must, of course, be preferred for steamships, for locomotives, and for all other moveable engines; provided these qualifications can be brought into useful application through the ordinary atmospheric influences.

For the purpose of showing the relative value of the different varieties of coal, so far as regards the properties necessary for successful employment in our steam marine, we annex a comparative statement from the CIAL ANALYSIS OF ANTHRACITE AND BITUMINOUS COAL

It will be seen, on reference to the above table, that the anthracite contains a very small quantity of bitumen; that the semi-bituminous contains about four times as much as the anthracite, and the bitumi sous too great an amount of volatile matter, causing it to cement in large masses. It is, therefore, too light to he used economically, except for very limited purposes It will thus be seen that where the greatest heat is required, the most natural and the most speedy ignition, the remi-bituminous is decidedly superior to all others. In order to consume the anthracite coal on beard our steamers, it is necessary to employ extra engines, to create artificial currents of air, to supply a deficiency in inflammable matter, and in doing so, a large portion of the heat is lost by being forced through the flues with too great velocity, and the boiler plates, furnace bars, &c , are scon destroyed. The more powerful these engines, and the greater the current of air. the more rapid the consumption of coal It is estimated that at least twenty-five per cent of the aggregate consumption are lost by the effect of the blowing engines. The semi-bituminous, (a description partaking of equal portions of the anthracite and bituminous qualities.) easily ignites The Cumberland is extensively used by our Ocean Steam Navigation Company, and those of Europe whose vessels touch at our ports, and by some of our most extensive ratiroad companies, in their lecomotives. This cost corresponds with the Welah, which is used by the British givernment and all the steamship companie, of the United Ringdom. Within the past year or two, more than baif a dozen steamship companies have been created in this country, most of which have their steam "rs in active peration; and in the course of a few years .we shall have dozens of these companies where we now have one. It is therefore of the utmost importance t not it should be determined at once, which, of all our varieties of coals, is the best adapted to that extensive service. So far, the leading variety of the semi-bituply is in xtaustible, and located on the line of the Cumberland Canal and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. it is accessible as the Schuylkill, by means of the Reading Railread and the Schuylkill Canal, and can be brought to market at very economical rates. The importance of this species of coal will be more generally understood when it is known that, for the purposes named, one ton is equal to more than two cords of wood, which makes it a fort to procure an appropriation for the support of the territory of Wisconsin. This, it was contended, was, in effect, establishing a new terrirory; and, on the same principle, New Mexico and California might send delegates. But the territory of Wisconsin was in fact superseded by her admission as a State into the Union. The House, however, would not make the appropriation; and so we have a delegate, in Mr. Sibley, representing a territory which the majority, who admitted him, say does not exist.

A gentleman at Port Lavaca has written to a friend in this city, under date of the 30th of Dec., that the cholera has nearly ceased; no new cases, and only one death within the last thirty-six hours. "We learn," he says, "that persons are dying at Housion, Texas, from thirty to forty a day; population, twenty-five hundred. At New Orleans the mortality is said to be very great, but not equal to that at Port Lavaca, where a hundred and thirty-five persons have died out of four hundred and thirty. This is as great a scourge as is known on record—for, for seventy-two hours consecutively, a sodier died; in other words seventy-two soldiers died in seventy-two hours."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1849. Evening Report.

The Senate, to-day, were employed in the consideration of private bills. They get on very slowly; for old cases that have been before Congress for fifty years, more or less, are debated over and over again, and the older the claim, however weak its again, and the older the claim, however weak its foundations, the stronger appears to be its claims upon the attention of the Senate.

The civil and diplomatic bill, with its multifarrous appropriations and untimited privilege of departure in the discussions upon it, affords sufficient entertsinment for the House. Meantime, Hen. John B. Weller, late democratic caudidate for Governor in Ohio, has been confirmed, as we expected he would promptly be, in the appointment of commissioner on the part of the United States, to run the boundary line between this republic and that of Mexico. This will be equal to three thousand dollars a year clear profiles, and the first pickings of the gold discoveries that are expected to be made along the route of the Gila river.

While the Southern States are rousing themselves to resistance against the Wilmot proviso, another compromise is spoken of. It is suggested that after the settlement of the Texas boundary, the residue of the territories acquired by the late treaty, apart from that portion of New Mexico which it is expected will be given to Texas, be provided with the fundamental provisions of territorial government, and that the question of slavery be considered a disputed question until such territories shall have formed themselves into a State or States, when the subject shall be left to the decision of the people in the formation of their constitution. Whether this thing may be presented or not, we susted that the House will be satisfied with nothing short of the Wilmot proviso for New Mexico; and the preliminary issue unon the boundary of Texas, if the Rie Grande be conceded in Texas all the way up, will, as we believe, save the passage of the proviso for the residue of the vast region acquired from Mexico through the adminable management of his Excellency, Don. Nicholas P Trist.

Mr. Clayton, in the Southern caucus of Monday night, objected to any rash or precipitate measures on the part of the South, as a pre-judgment of Faylor, and pledged himself, as we understand, that old Zack would be true to the compromises of the constitution. This leaves us all in doubt again; for it is to be presumed that Mr. Clayton has acquainted himself to some extent with the opinions of General Taylor, from the position which it is supposed Mr. Clayton is to occupy in the new administration. But whatever efforts Mr. Clayton may make, upon his plan of the last session, to refer the slavery question to the Supreme Court, we While the Southern States are rousing themselves ministration. But whatever efforts Mr. Clayton may make, upon his plan of the last session, to refer the slavery question to the Supreme Court, we apprehend the House is fixed for the provise, and that the Senate will be at the next session. In this view, the question recurs—Will General Taylor endorse the proviso? If passed, we incline to think that he will, and throw his detence upon the precedents of the federal ordinance and the Oregon bill, and upon his pledges antertor to his election.

The session, thus far, has been dull, ominous
